Dear RZA,

My name is Timothy Mansfield and I'm from Arizona. One summer day my brother and my sister and I heard an ice cream truck so like usual we ran to our dad for some money. Although we sprinted around the block many times in the middle of the summer, we couldn't find the ice cream truck. We were frustrated that we lost it we went back home sweaty with no ice cream.

I have been talking about ice cream trucks for years. When recently my dad read the NPR article about your new song. I was tremendously excited at this new opportunity to promote my idea to the world. I did some research about you, because I was very interested in what the article had to say. I learned about your success and how easily your career seemed to take off.

In fact, the timing of your song and my idea seemed almost too perfect, for you created an ice cream truck song and I created an ice cream truck app. The app I constructed would be called Wucream-truck, and it would be a better way for kids to get ice cream without running around blocks to do so! It also would be a way for ice cream truck drivers to earn more money by streamlining their deliveries. Ice cream would be transported to a house once requested, and then the ice cream truck would play your song.

when the ice cream was delivered.
it seemed like a pretty cool idea to me, and I was wondering if we could have permission to use your name and your song on our website and app.
I am also hoping you might consider being a business partner to help get my idea up and running! In fact we will appreciate any advice you might be willing to give!

Thank you for taking the time to read this letter and for your consideration.
It was fun working on my new app, and I think that if you can lend us a helpi ng hand, you can have fun too

Sincerely,

Timothy Mansfield
